The Under Sheriff of San Bernardino has procured a couple of bloodhounds for trailing criminals and tried them on a petty offender a few days since. They ran the trusty up a tree and nearly took a piece of his anatomy with them when he attempted to come down.

Yet when properly managed, bloodhounds are the best things in the world to trail criminals and might have been used to advantage in the Barth case.

No Place for Drones.

In a circular sent out by the Midwinter commissioners is the following:

Office seekers have been a source of great annoyance to those in charge here. Scarcely a day passes that hundreds of applications are not received from those who wish positions with the Exposition in California. Most of these people are led to apply for positions in the hope of being able to spend a winter, beneath California's sunny skies, without cost to themselves. This is very gratifying to Californians, but at the same time it is not possible to oblige everyone. There are thousands of people holding positions under the World's Columbian Exposition, many of them having sinecures. As at the California Midwinter International Exposition, only the best of the exhibits in the various departments will be shown because of the limited space at the Exposition management's disposal; so it will be possible only to give employment to the best men in each department. Especially will there be no room for drones in the busy hive.

The Work of Toughs.

It is reported that the fire destroyed the work of tough characters who bore the local justice a grudge. The fire broke out in the residence of Judge Dyer, Justice of the Peace at Pizen. The Judge was disliked by the hard characters of the place, and the supposition is that the fire was lighted by some of them. Three of them were taken up by the authorities on suspicion of the crime. One of those jailed is Will O'Donnell who achieved notoriety in this place some time ago by stealing horses from Luke's stable in company with some other toughs. His brother was sent to jail by the Justice some time past. If the crime is fastened upon the suspected parties, it will go hard with them.

It is reported that the fire destroyed, among other buildings, the principal hotel and Armory Hall, which was recently built at an expense of $5,000. The hall was occupied by Company I of the militia, whose guns and accoutrements were mostly consumed.

THE GREELEY STAGE.

In Which Hank Monk Drove the Philosopher to Placerville.

The stage in which Hank Monk drove Horace Greeley the Tribune philosopher to Placerville, will probably be one of the exhibits of the '49 Mining Camp. It is in Douglas county, that is the bed top and axle.

The wheels are in Genoa and it is proposed to get the old historic relic together and send it to the '49 camp at the Midwinter Fair.

Doc Benton has the gold watch presented to Monk after that memorable ride in which the famous Tribune editor was requested to keep his seat if he desired to reach Placerville on time.

No one vehicle in the United States has been more extensively advertised than this relic.

It made Hank Monk's name famous all over the world and it made Greeley temporarily ridiculous, so much so in fact that Greeley never forgave Hank for his joke and years afterwards when Joe Goodman met Greeley in New York and pleasantly gave him Monk's regards the great editor broke forth in a torrent of profanity.

"Yes that is the d—— ——— that made me ridiculous to the American people."

Doc Benton has a lot of relics of poor old Hank Monk which he has kindly placed at the disposal of the '49 camp and offers to drive the stage with six fast horses over the same old Placerville road and right into the '49 camp.

The idea is to have fresh horses every ten miles as in the old days and send the animals through under the whip on the dead run to see if the old records cannot be broken.

The ranchers and horsemen on the line offer to furnish the relays of horses every five miles if necessary. The drive will be a memorable one but the stage men say that the old wheels won't stand the run. If this is the case the old wheels will be placed on the top of the coach and new wheels used for the run.

The people along the route are enthusiastic over the proposed scheme and fancy prices are already being offered for seats on the stage by sagebrushers who would like to take the ride.

If there is no snow storm to prevent, the trip can be made and if the snow is not too heavy the ranchers along the route offer to break the road and keep it clear.

Rats Taking a Spin.

The following choice bit of fiction comes from the pen of Jim Townsend of the Homer Index, and can be relied on:

A colony of huge wood-rats has taken possession of the old postoffice, which the cunning and interesting rodents are preparing for a winter residence. Some of their pranks are amusing, and they do things which seem to be quite impossible, just for fun of it. Looking down from the the cockpit into the old store, he was astonished to see the wheels of Butterfield's buggy whizzing like a buzz saw. Upon closer inspection he saw, by the bright moonlight, that each spoke was literally loaded with hugh rats, all chattering and squealing in infinite glee. After a minute or two a wheel stopped and a dozen or more rats jumped off and scampered towards the cellar, returning almost instantly, each with a potato in his mouth. Dropping the spuds in front of a long-whiskered old fellow they rejoined their comrades on the wheel which began to whizz again. The spectator, though in undress uniform viewed the novel sight with much interest and finally explained it to himself. The rats had got hold of an illustrated newspaper with a cut of the Ferris wheel at the World's Fair, and had raised the buggy on a bale of hay to give the wheels play, determined to have a jolly ride-around, all the same as the big Chicago revolver. The long-whiskered old fellow was the originator of the scheme and charged a potato a head for a ride. The looker-on put on his cloths and went out to tell others about the singular show. When he returned with his friends there were no rats in sight and the wheels were still, but the hubs were hot.

TIMBER GETTING SCARCE.

What Seemed an Inexhaustible Supply About Cleaned Up.

The Reno Gazette says that Yerington & Bliss will be obliged to suspend their lumbering and wood operation at Lake Tahoe in about two years more, owing to the scarcity of timber. The shores for a mile or two back have been stripped of marketable lumber, and the Carson & Tahoe Wood and Lumber Company will have to hunt handier timber. For twenty years or more Lake Tahoe has furnished the bulk of the timber that has gone into the bowels of the Comstock, and the wood that has made the steam to hoist the thousands upon thousands of tons of ore has almost exclusively come from the shores of that beautiful sheet of water and the hills west of Carson.

The Truckee, too, has almost been entirely stripped of handy timber, and in a few years—yes, very few years—that fine tract of timber land north of us, in Sierra, Plumas and Lassen counties, California, will come into play, and another generation will see that which seems to be almost an inexhaustible supply go to dot the plains with happy homes, and will be ground up under the feet of progress. The time is not very far distant when the people will realize that they have been wasteful of nature's forests. Had there not been such waste there would have been timber enough left in the now almost denuded territory spoken of to last many years. There is wood enough lying rotting on the ground in the hills skirting the big basin to have lasted for two generations. The time is coming, and that very soon, when our forests will have to be more thoroughly protected by the strong arms of the law than they are now.

The Parson's Present.

Carson people will remember Laura Dainty the charming little elocutionist who visited Carson a few years ago. She is now Mrs. Phelan. The writer met her in Chicago and she sent by him a present to Parson Davis.

It was a Dutch beer mug of one quart capacity and had a large pewter lid on it. On the bottom is inscribed:

"Swiped from a popular Gambrenus temple in Denver Col., by Laura Dainty Phelan expressly for the Rev. Geo. R. Davis of Carson City Nevada, during a fit of temporary mental abstraction—on the part of the waiter." The lady explained that the proprietor agreed to present her with a much better mug, but the novelty of swiping one herself was too great to be resisted, especially as some of her friends accused her of lacking the nerve to do it. The mug is highly prized by the Parson who has written her a letter granting full absolution for her sly whack at the Eighth Commandment.

Toughs.

Several tough boys tried to force their way into the Thanksgiving dance last night at about one o'clock. They struck a door keeper over the head and were only prevented from doing him up by an assistant. After the assault on the doorkeeper made by the toughs they were driven off by Special Policeman Hambridge and O'Toole, who fired a number of shots at them, but without hitting them.—Va. Chronicle.

Parties from Virginia say that these toughs, known as the C. C. gang, afterwards set upon Officer Hambridge and beat him nearly to death.
